Community Awards for the 2009 Season
By: Ivy Williams

At our February team captain meeting we celebrated our annual Community Awards. These awards are selected by a nominating committee based upon individuals and groups that show support for Relay through fundraising as well as communicating our mission in the community.

This is an excellent opportunity to shine the light on deserving volunteers who have gone above and beyond to show their support for Relay for Life and the American Cancer Society as a whole.

This year we recognized

Yvonne Eisenburg for the Award of Excellence for Diversity

Myrtle Kite, Rick Taylor and Bill Lobb for the Award of Excellence for Volunteer Leadership

Jana Marshall for the Award of Excellence for Income Development

Best Buy for the Award of Excellence for Corporate Support

Alison Painter for the Volunteer Communicator of the Year Award

Emberli McGann for the Award of Excellence for Youth.

Congratulations to all of winners and keep up the excellent work!

2/2/2010

Dear Augusta County Relay for Life Teams,

Every year I am astounded at how our community has been able to rise to the challenge set for us by the American Cancer Society and cancer itself. This is my 3rd year as the Wilson Memorial High School RFL team co-captain and each year the generosity and resiliency of my colleagues and our school community has continued to amaze me, especially in the face of adversity.

This year our school community suffered a heavy blow when Tom Larner, the husband of one of our biology teachers, Angie Larner and the brother of our school trainer Susanna Larner, succumbed to his two year battle with colon cancer. January 12th will stand in my mind as a date to always remember him and what his battle says to each of us about our community’s continuing battle against cancer.

But Tom was an important member of another community, too… he was a sergeant in the Staunton Police Department. That was why I was so thrilled to find out at the January team captains meeting that his brothers and sisters in blue had formed a Relay Team. I walked right over and introduced myself and offered my services. They have some great ideas and I am sure they will honor Tom’s memory in ways that we at WMHS have not even thought of yet. I want to sincerely thank them for joining in the fight. However, we can always do more!

I am writing this letter today to issue a challenge to all the public safety organizations in the area to join us in the fight against cancer by forming Relay for Life teams. If just the police departments joined we could have three new teams by tomorrow… imagine if all of the various groups who also protect us and keep us safe were to join up! We could really make a huge difference in the lives of those impacted by cancer in Augusta County!

So, let everyone you know in public safety that the challenge to join has been issued and honor your loved ones by urging your group to join Relay for Life!

Sincerely,
Stephen J. Singleton

2010 RELAY FOR LIFE OF AUGUSTA COUNTY
2010 Relay For Life Team Auction Event

Following is an overview on how this year’s team auction will be done.

Each team that wishes to participate will donate a “Gift Basket” of items that they either purchased or hopefully can get donated.

Each basket will have a value between $50.00 and $75.00.

The baskets will be brought to the Relay event on that Friday night (May 14th) before 6 pm.

The gift baskets will be displayed either in the cafeteria or preferably at a designated location on the track. More people will see the baskets if they are on the track.

Each basket will have a number assigned to it and a “Relay Canister” with a matching number on it for ticket stubs. Your team should fill out a 3 x 5 card to be displayed with the basket listing the team name, what the basket contains and its approximate value.

Tickets can then be purchased by individuals the night of relay for $1.00 each, 7 tickets for $5.00, 15 tickets for $10.00 or 35 tickets for $20.00. The ticket(s) will be filled in with the person’s name and their team name.

The tickets are then deposited in any canister that the person wishes to try and win.

For example if I bought 20 tickets, I could place 1 ticket in 20 different Relay Canisters, 5 tickets each in 4 different Relay Canisters, or all 20 tickets in one Canister to increase my odds of winning that basket.

At midnight we will start pulling the winning tickets. Each “Relay Canister” will be opened and the tickets for that basket placed in a large container and shaken up, then one winning ticket will be selected for each gift basket. The winner must be present to win or give the ticket to a friend staying through the night. The relay committee will not be responsible for delivering the gift baskets to the winners.

All of the money collected will then be divided equally between the teams that participated. If 50 teams each did a Gift Basket and the event raised $10,000 each team would be given $200 toward their team total. (10,000 divided by 50 = 200). If a team wishes to do 2 Gift Baskets, then they would receive 2X the amount of the dispersal rate.

So start thinking of a basket of goodies that people would love to try and win. Then get your team to help out in securing the items and placing all of the items in a nice decorative gift basket, bag or box. Be sure to fill in a 3 x 5 index card with your team name, a list of what the items are, the approximate value and any special information (such as if there is an expiration date on a gift certificate, etc.). Bring it all to the relay event where it can be checked in and displayed.

GOOD LUCK!

Rick Taylor

Waynesboro-Wilson to ’Play for a Cure’

Staunton News Leader article dated February 1, 2010

FISHERSVILLE — When Waynesboro travels to Wilson Memorial on Tuesday for their Southern Valley District girls’ basketball game, the two teams will be joining forces to ‘Play For A Cure.’

As part of the night where raising money for cancer research is the central focus, both teams will be wearing special shirts and there will be events throughout the game. There will be door prizes and games for the kids. Proceeds from the game will benefit breast cancer awareness, pancreatic cancer awareness, colon cancer awareness and Relay For Life.

The jayvee game starts at 5:30 p.m. with the varsity clash to follow.

Keep up the great work!
Listen With Your Heart

This is the next installment in an ongoing series of articles to share ideas on how to be supportive and helpful when you talk with someone who has cancer.

Concern for the Family and Caregivers

Just as people with cancer should not spend all their time thinking about their illness, neither should family members and friends spend every spare minute thinking about or being with their loved one. Caregivers need relief and rest if they are to stay emotionally and physically fit and continue to be helpful to their loved one with cancer. If you are a caregiver, plan time for yourself. Ask friends or other members of the family for help. Tell them exactly what they can do to be helpful. Many times they are just waiting to be asked. For more information please our document called Caregiving: How to Care for A Loved One with Cancer -- And Yourself.

If you are not the main caregiver of the person with cancer, it helps to think about that person as well. Caregivers often focus most of their energies and spare time on their loved one with cancer and may not have time to take care of themselves. You may be able to offer help so that they can have a much-needed break. Just a couple of hours may be a big deal for someone whose loved one is very ill. Even if you are not able to do this, the caregiver might like to hear someone ask how she is doing and what she is feeling. It can be very lonely and stressful to be the main supporter for a person with cancer. With everyone concerned over the person with cancer, it's easy for the caregiver to be overlooked.

ADVOCACY CORNER

Advocacy: (noun)
The act of pleading or arguing in favor of something, such as a cause, idea, or policy; active support.

TIPS FOR BECOMING AN EFFECTIVE CANCER ADVOCATE

Passing legislation that supports our cancer issues is a challenging process that requires active participation by our volunteers. There are many ways for a volunteer to be an effective cancer advocate.

Note: The American Cancer Society does not support or oppose political candidates. Communications to current lawmakers are intended to impact the lawmaker's view on cancer legislation, and should not be considered as support or opposition of any individual's candidacy.

Call a Talk Show

Calling the television or radio talk shows in your area is a great way to help get your message to thousands of listeners. Call your local radio and television stations and ask if they have any talk shows.

If so and the topic is relevant, make an effort to call in and share short, concise statements about current cancer-related issues. If there is a cancer-related bill making its way through the legislative process, the host may keep the topic on the air for several minutes.

Also, try contacting the producer of the call-in program and urge him or her to cover a specific cancer-related issue. Give the producer the American Cancer Society telephone number to ensure a knowledgeable participant for the program you are suggesting.

If the program is a go, be sure to inform your friends and family, and encourage them to listen and actively participate in the show.

Can Aspirin Reduce the Risk of Breast Cancer Recurrence?

Article date: 2/16/2010  By: Rebecca Viksnins Snowden

Women with breast cancer who take aspirin regularly after diagnosis and treatment may have a dying from breast cancer or seeing their breast cancer come back in distant parts of the body (k recurrence), according to a new study published in The Journal of Clinical Oncology. However, recommend breast cancer patients start taking aspirin because of these findings. More research is needed to confirm any benefits, and taking aspirin regularly has known risks, including serious stomach bleeding.

The study, led by researchers from Brigham and Women’s Hospital, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, and Harvard Medical School and funded by the National Institutes of Health, is the largest to look at whether taking aspirin and other non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) after breast cancer diagnosis reduces the risk of breast cancer death or distant recurrence. Previous studies have had mixed results. Some research has shown that the drugs may have a protective effect, while other studies have found no association.

What this study found

The Nurses’ Health Study is a large, ongoing study investigating the role of lifestyle factors on women’s health. As part of the study, researchers looked at aspirin use among 4,164 nurses aged 30 to 55 who were diagnosed with stage I, II, or III breast cancer between 1976 and 2002. The women were followed through 2006.

Most women who took aspirin regularly were taking it for heart disease prevention. The researchers found that regular aspirin users had a lower risk of distant breast cancer recurrence and breast cancer death. Women who were regular aspirin users had a nearly 50 percent lower risk of breast cancer death and risk of distant recurrence compared to those who did not take aspirin. This is the first study to suggest that taking aspirin regularly may have a survival benefit.

"This is the first study to find that aspirin can significantly reduce the risk of cancer spread and death for women who have been treated for early-stage breast cancer," said Michelle Holmes, MD, DrPH, associate professor of medicine and epidemiology at Harvard Medical School & Harvard School of Public Health and the study’s lead author. "If these findings are confirmed in other clinical trials, taking aspirin may become another simple, low-cost and relatively safe tool to help women with breast cancer live longer, healthier lives."

While this study did not look at the amount of aspirin the women were taking, the typical dose used to try to prevent heart disease is about 81 mg a day.

Should you be taking aspirin?

Researchers don’t know for sure how aspirin might affect cancer growth. NSAIDs inhibit the enzyme cyclooxygenase, which could play a role in disrupting breast cancer growth by suppressing estrogen synthesis. Aspirin is unique among NSAIDs: it irreversibly inhibits cyclooxygenase, which could explain its possible preventive role. Some research has suggested aspirin may affect cancer growth because of its anti-inflammatory effects (chronic inflammation has been linked to cancer). However, scientists are still investigating these processes.

In the meantime, experts caution that more studies will be needed to prove that taking aspirin reduces the risk of breast cancer recurrence or death. Taken by itself, the result of this single study should not imply that all women with breast cancer should start taking aspirin.

"If using aspirin reduces risk of disease recurrence and death in women with breast cancer, it would be of great importance to the millions of women who are breast cancer survivors. However, this is an observational study and results should be viewed cautiously," according to Eric Jacobs, PhD, American Cancer Society strategic director, pharmacoepidemiology.

"It would be premature for breast cancer survivors to use aspirin in order to reduce risk of breast cancer recurrence or of dying from their disease. Cancer survivors, as well as other adults, should discuss the risks and benefits of aspirin use with their doctor. Aspirin use can cause adverse effects, including serious gastrointestinal bleeding," says Jacobs.

The study authors caution women who are undergoing breast cancer treatment to talk to their doctors before taking aspirin – it can affect the action of other drugs.
